FIRST FATAL ACCIDENT

Anthony Dunn, a Miner, Meets a Horrible Death.

On Thanksgiving morning at 7:30 o'clock a gloom was cast over our populace, by the announcement that Anthony Dunn, or "Tony" Dunn, had been killed in the Cutting & Brown shaft.

From the facts evinced at the Coroner's jury it appears that the shift had descended the ladder and on reaching the 100 level had stepped from the ladder and gone to their respective places of work. Tony Dunn and his partner who were working in the bottom of the shaft, 60 feet below the 100-level, had gone into the drift at this level for candles and returned to the shaft to again take the ladder to the bottom. Dunn was ahead of his partner and was about twenty feet below the level when his companion emerged from the drift he saw the bucket rapidly descending the ladder which is used for the track upon which it runs. Dunn's partner grabbed the bell cord and gave a stop bell, but the rapid motion of the bucket and the short distance it had to travel before overtaking Dunn it was impossible for the top man to stop the tub. The rim of the bucket struck poor Tony Dunn on the left side of the head cracking the skull wide open and forcing the brains from the cavity. After the blow the unfortunate fell backwards and to the bottom of the shaft.

The Coroner's jury carefully ascertained all the facts rendered the following verdict:

We, the undersigned, the jurors summoned to appear before Clay Peters, Justice of the Peace and ex officio Coroner of Tonopah Township, Nye County, Nevada, on the 28th day of November, 1901, to inquire into the death of A. J. Dunn, having been duly sworn according to law, and having made such inquisition, after inspecting the body and hearing the testimony adduced, upon our oaths, each and all do say, that we find the deceased was named A. J. Dunn, that he came to his death on the 28th day of November, 1901, through accident, which accident we believe was largely due to the fact that the rules and regulations governing the operation of the lease in which the accident occurred were insufficient for the safety of the men working therein.

All of which we duly certify by this inquisition, in writing, by us signed, this twenty-eight day of November, 1901.

J. N. Cole,
J. D. McMahon,
H. Ramsey,
E. V. Sales,
W. A. Powers,
S. S. Carothers.

The deceased had followed mining for the past 40 years in this State and California, and was greatly esteemed for his jovial disposition and his honorable traits through life. He was a friend to everybody and had no enemies, was a native of Ireland and 58 years of age.

The funeral was held from Miners, Exchange Hall, under the auspices of Tonopah Miners' Union of which deceased was a member, Rev. James M. Butler officiating. The funeral cortege was the largest ever seen in Tonopah, there being 400 miners in line and over fifty persons in carriages.

The members of the Porter-Charles Company rendered beautiful hymns at the hall and the grave.

OLD LIBERTY

A Camp With a Past History And Future Promise.

Leaven of Tonopah's prosperity is spreading over the adjoining country to such an extent that long forgotten and overlooked mines are being rejuvenated, brought to the front and their merits exploited.

An instance of this nature is the Liberty mine and adjoining prospects, situated about 12 miles north of Tonopah. Mr. Butler, the discoverer of Tonopah has said that it was the knowledge of the former richness of the Liberty ores and the extensive production of the camp which led him to seek an extension of the Liberty formation and ledges to south and which resulted in the discovery of Tonopah.

Certain, it is that the old mine has yielded a large amount of the precious metals, both gold and silver, the exact amount being difficult to determine, but estimated in the neighborhood of one million dollars. The fact that the principal value of the ore was in silver was what led to the closing up of the mine with the depreciation of that metal.

The remains of old machinery, hoisting works, etc., on the ground together with the 700 foot shaft, the great drifts and stopes connected therewith, and the large dumps, all bear eloquent testimony to the past productiveness.

The county in the vicinity of the old mines is well mineralized and attractive to the prospectors. A mile to the north is a mountain composed entirely of quartz. The formation of the country is lime and porphyry, with numerous ledges more or less well defined.

There is quite a little work being done in the camp at the present in the way of development. Harris and Lambert some time ago relocated the old Liberty mine, which is said to contain pillars of ore in the old croppings which carry values as high as $400 per ton. They have bonded their property to Colorado parties, represented by Mr. Ish, for a good figure.

L. A. Green and Clay Peters own the extension of the Liberty mine, upon which ledges containing ore carrying values as high as $119 per ton have been opened up by prospect work. Phillips and Maunder have a fine looking prospect in the near vicinity, which yields ore carrying high values in gold, silver and copper.

Liberty is an adjunct to Tonopah, and its development into a producer means added prosperity to the camp. The facilities are good for the working of the ore, both wood and water being close at hand in sufficient quantity.

The extension of the railroad from Austin down the Smoky Valley is all that is needed to bring the old camp to the front again.

Our State has a brilliant future before it. Prosperity sparks illuminate every turn of all roads within its borders. We are a happy lot of people and our larders are always well filled. Trib does not mend a broken wheel.
